RCMP arrest at least 24 pipeline protesters

Burnaby Mountain. Activists started camping on the mountain in September after Kinder Morgan said it needed to do work related to pipeline expansion

THANDI FLETCHER

Protester Marija Brzev locked herself to a cement block with a bike lock on Thursday as at least a dozen RCMP officers stormed an anti-pipeline encampment on Burnaby Mountain and started making arrests. JENNIFER GAUTHIER/FOR METRO

Tensions between protesters and authorities came to a head on Burnaby Mountain on Thursday, as at least a dozen RCMP officers stormed an anti-pipeline encampment and started making arrests.

At least 24 people were taken into police custody, many in handcuffs, for violating a court injunction that ordered protesters to clear the way for Kinder Morgan survey crews to return to the area, according to a news release from a group calling themselves the Burnaby Mountain Supporters.

RCMP Staff Sgt. Maj. John Buis said half of those arrested were released on the condition they no longer interfere, obstruct or impede crews working on the energy giant's proposed plan to expand its Trans Mountain pipeline.

The remaining protesters were being processed at the scene and would also be released if they agreed to abide by the court order, he said.

Buis said police would leave the dismantling of the camp used by protesters to Kinder Morgan crews.

A crew with the energy giant arrived several hours after the first arrests and took measurements as protesters shouted at them to stop.

"This pipeline won't be built! Shame on you!" they chanted at the workers, who left about a half hour after arriving.

Activists started camping out on Burnaby Mountain in September after Kinder Morgan said it needed to do survey work related to its pipeline expansion project, which has not yet received federal approval.

An injunction granted by a B.C. Supreme Court judge took effect Monday afternoon, but police had not made any move to enforce the order before Thursday's arrests.

Around noon, one of the protesters, Marija Brzev, 22, secured herself to a cement block using a bike lock around her neck.

"We're not going to let them build this pipeline," she said, as a group of protesters surrounded her, covering her with blankets and giving her food and water.

By 1:30 p.m., a police officer negotiated with Brzev to unlock herself.

"If you don't leave, you'll be arrested," he told her calmly. "So you have two choices. Take the key, unlock yourself and walk away, or if you choose not to, you'll be arrested."

Another protester, Chris Fofonoff, who was arrested around 10 a.m., said he decided to return to the encampment after he was released from a nearby processing centre as a show of support for other demonstrators.

"It's helpful to let them know that the little camp down the hill is not a horrific experience — that they need not be too afraid," he said.

Three women, including Squamish First Nation member Clarissa Antone, were still permitted to enter and leave the camp.

Several other First Nations women arrived later and also entered the tent encampment, where they sat around the sacred fire and spoke with police.

Buis said police were in discussions with the women on how to respectfully remove the sacred fire and a totem pole that remained inside the zone in contravention of the court injunction.

A spokesman for Kinder Morgan wouldn't comment about Thursday's arrests and referred any comment back to the RCMP.

Metro Vancouverites say no to amalgamation: Poll

Megacity, mega-headache? 60% of people polled were opposed to the idea

EMILY JACKSON
emily.jackson@metronews.ca

Imagine if Surrey, Vancouver and Richmond were all controlled by a single city council.

If you get a headache just thinking about what the megacity councillors would fight about, you're not alone.

Sixty per cent of Metro Vancouverites disagree or strongly disagree with the idea of the 21 Metro Vancouver municipalities amalgamating into one giant city like Toronto or Montreal, according to an Insights West poll released Thursday.

Residents outside Vancouver and Surrey, the two largest cities by far, were especially opposed to the idea, according to the poll. After all, it might be challenging for the Village of Lions Bay to get any attention when the big players battled over resources for rapid transit and crime prevention.

Amalgamation is often proposed as a cost-saving measure and was forced down Torontonians' throats by the Ontario government in 1998. The move sparked a major divide between the suburbs and the downtown core, but it's unclear whether it actually saved any cash.

Metro Vancouverites, however, are less clear on whether they want a ward system. Residents are almost equally split between supportive, opposing and undecided stances on the proposal, according to the poll.

Vancouver and Surrey were more in favour of a ward system, with 52 per cent and 43 per cent support respectively, than the smaller municipalities where only 24 per cent support the idea.

The poll did not consider other election reforms such as proportional representation.

The online poll surveyed 1,532 adults in 19 Metro Vancouver municipalities from Nov. 15 to Nov. 17.

Soo Yo Kim

Man charged for keying over 100 vehicles

Charges have been approved for a man accused of keying over 100 Vancouver-area vehicles this month.

Police in New Westminster say an investigation was recently launched into Soo Yo Kim under suspicions that he was scratching vehicles earlier this month.

Police say the 37-year-old Coquitlam man was arrested after investigators saw him keying cars in Burnaby on Tuesday.

He has now been charged with two counts of mischief over $5,000 in connection to 129 damaged vehicles, all of them in New Westminster and Burnaby.

Police say they are continuing their investigation around several more incidents of vehicle-related mischief.

Kim is in custody and is expected to appear in court on Monday.

Gender identity rights bill tabled a third time

'Hoping we can get action.' MLA still trying to get government to address transgender rights in province's Human Rights Code

emily.jackson@metronews.ca

Vancouver-West End MLA Spencer Chandra Herbert. MATT KIELTYKA/METRO

The first two times Vancouver-West End NDP MLA Spencer Chandra Herbert introduced a bill to protect gender identity and expression in B.C.'s Human Rights Code, nothing happened.

But he hopes the government will have a change of heart and pass the legislation, which he tabled for the third time on Thursday, the Transgender Day of Remembrance.

The bill would involve adding the right to gender identity and expression specifically in the code alongside other clauses such as race, gender and age.

"It does need to be explicit when transgender people face much, much higher levels of violence and discrimination," Chandra Herbert said.

Nearly 75 per cent of transgender students have been verbally harassed because of their gender identity, 49 per cent have been sexually harassed and 37 per cent have been physically harassed, according to a 2011 national survey by Egale Canada Human Rights.

Transgender people in the workplace do not fare better, according to a 2014 survey by the public service alliance of Canada.

It found that 97 per cent of transgender people have been harassed in their workplace, 26 per cent have lost their job due to gender identity and 10 per cent have attempted suicide.

Ontario, Manitoba, Nova Scotia and the Northwest Territories have all added gender identity to their human rights codes, Herbert said.

Chandra Herbert received "wholehearted" support from his NDP colleagues, the Independents and the Green Party's sole MLA, and said the B.C. Liberals said they would take a look at it.

When he first tabled it in 2009 he never received a response from the government. On his second try in 2011, the minister of justice congratulated him on his work for human rights. He was told the government would consider the addition the next time they addressed the code, but that they had no plans to do so.

Yet he remains optimistic that the new government, elected in 2013, will be more supportive this time.

"I'm hoping we can get action, if not right now, hopefully in the spring," Chandra Herbert said.

Abbotsford acupuncture clinic clients urged to get HIV tests

Health officials are urging clients of an Abbotsford acupuncture clinic to get tested for Hepatitis B, Hepatitis C and HIV, after discovering hazardous needle-handling practices at the centre.

Services offered by Duan (Deborah) Hu at the Acupuncture and Chinese Medicine Centre at 11-2168 McCallum Road did not meet infection prevention standards, according to an advisory issued by Fraser Health on Thursday.

Officials investigated the clinic after hearing concerns about inadequate infection control and unsanitary acupuncture techniques.

Based on the investigation, officials decided to alert Hu's clients that they may be at risk of exposure to blood-borne infections, Fraser Health's Dr. Michelle Murti said in a statement.

Since Hu kept poor records, Fraser Health also issued a public warning.

200-millionth rider boards Canada Line

Five years of service.
Pair of lucky passengers to receive mementos of TransLink's appreciation

STEFANIA SECCIA
vancouver@metronews.ca

The Canada Line boarded its 200-millionth passenger this week, according to TransLink.

On the evening of Nov. 16, an unwitting rider hit a milestone for the five-year-old line that opened in August 2009.

"We're celebrating the Canada Line," said Colleen Brennan, TransLink's vice-president of communications and customer engagement.

"We're going to be presenting two passengers with mementoes of our appreciation to mark this milestone for the Canada Line."

Significance

"It's been a boost for businesses and developers as well as getting people closer to transit to be able to shop and live without travelling so far in a vehicle."
Colleen Brennan, TransLink's vice-president of communications and customer engagement

The $2-billion 19.2 kilometres of track connecting Vancouver and Richmond sees about 100,000 passengers daily, according to 2013 data. During the Winter Olympics in 2010, the line carried more than 228,000 people a day.

"We've actually had a number of very positive outcomes with transit-oriented communities," Brennan noted.

"It was part of the vision when the Canada Line was first perceived. It's been a boost for businesses and developers as well as getting people closer to transit to be able to shop and live without travelling so far in a vehicle."

On Friday and Saturday, TransLink is launching the sixth annual Drive on the Line blanket drive, which will be set up at eight stations along the Canada Line.

Brennan said they hope to beat last year's goal of collecting 8,000 blankets while helping raise awareness about homelessness.

"We're partnering with Blanket BC to help people who don't have a warm place to sleep or don't have a warm place to live," she said.

"There's going to be bins set up with 150 volunteers collecting blankets, warm clothing and scarves. The goal is to collect more than 10,000 blankets."

In the early hours of Sunday, October 5th fire swept through the Dragonzone trailer and storage containers on the south shore of False Creek.

We were relieved to learn that no one was hurt in the fire, nor did we lose any dragon boats. We did however suffer some big losses.

Most significantly, we lost all ten of our single-person outrigger canoes (OC1). This was a new and popular fleet and one we had been building for a few years so is a blow to our club and the paddlers.

We also lost dozens of paddles, two generators, several small tents, flags and other event equipment.

The residents of Vancouver and elsewhere have been swift to offer support and assistance for which we are enormously grateful. We are slowly taking inventory and starting to rebuild.

Thanks to all for your support and offers to help us replace what we have lost.
We are very grateful for the strength and generosity of the paddling community and residents of Vancouver.

Investment. Nisga'a Nation signs pipeline benefits deal with B.C

The head of the Nisga'a Nation said his people are embracing the possibility of a liquefied natural gas industry by permitting energy companies to run a pipeline through the nation's territory in northwestern British Columbia, with the hope for more investment to come.

The Nisga'a and B.C. Liberal government signed a benefit sharing agreement Thursday that will see the nation receive about $6 million from the province for a proposed natural gas pipeline that would pass through 97 kilometres of its treaty lands.

Nisga'a Nation President Mitchell Stevens said at a news conference at the legislature that his people want much more than the proposed Prince Rupert Gas Transmission Pipeline project.

Festival. The event is free and takes place in studios bounded by Main Street and Victoria Drive, north of First Avenue

With more than 400 artists taking part in this weekend's Eastside Culture Crawl, organizer Esther Rausenberg knows the annual event can be overwhelming for visitors.

"Be prepared to be easily and quickly distracted," Rausenberg said with a laugh. "It doesn't take long before you're off course."

While getting sidetracked is a pleasant side effect of the cultural crawl experience, Rausenberg has some advice for newcomers.

"Give yourself a lot more time than what you think you can cover," she said. "Start off with something you think you may like, and you'll be pleasantly surprised with lots of other things you had no idea where out there."

East Vancouver's visual arts, design and crafts festival, which kicked off Thursday and runs until Sunday, is expected to see more than 20,000 people visiting artists in their studios.

With the number of participating artists and visitors growing each year, Rausenberg said organizers decided to extend this year's festival by one day.

"The public was coming through and they were in a rush to see the next thing," she said.

The Eastside Culture Crawl is free and takes place in studios in the area bounded by Main Street and Victoria Drive, north of First Avenue. Hours are from 5 to 10 p.m. Thursday and Friday, and 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Operation Red Nose back with free rides

Making sure people get home safely. Plus raising money for youth charity

STEFANIA SECCIA
vancouver@metronews.ca

Operation Red Nose is back to take the reins from party-goers who have a little bit too much to drink and get them home safely.

On weekends from Nov. 28 to Dec. 31, volunteers with the program will be offering rides to people who don't feel fit to drive home. The service, in its 19th year, is offered in 25 communities across the province, including New Westminster, Burnaby and the Tri-Cities.

Last year in B.C., the program provided 8,000 rides thanks to 4,300 volunteers.

"There's no question about it: This program saves lives and keeps our roads, keeps our communities safe," said Insp. Paul Hyland, with the New Westminster Police Department.

"We're giving people the opportunity to go and celebrate, enjoy the holidays, have some drinks, but ... get them home safe to their families."

Locally, 619 rides were given by 281 volunteers behind the wheel. The program also raises funds for disadvantaged youths in amateur sports organizations through KidSport and gets money from in-kind donations from those taking the ride.

Last year, $27,000 was raised in region.

Chris Wilson, Operation Red Nose chairperson for the Tri-Cities, New Westminster and Burnaby, said the reason so many volunteers sign up is because they've had a driving incident affect them or loved ones.

"They want to make sure people get home safely," he said. "The other thing is, while they're getting people home safely they're also raising money for a really important charity."

Each ride given consists of three volunteers: One drives the client home in the client's own car with a fellow volunteer navigating, and a third volunteer following in their own car to make sure everyone gets home without incident.

Wilson said he hopes to break records this year with more rides and more volunteers to potentially save lives.

To get a safe ride home, clients can call 778-866-6673.

Hopscotch Festival wraps up this weekend

Hopscotch Festival organizer Adam Bloch. JENNIFER GAUTHIER/METRO FILE

The largest annual whiskey, beer and spirits festival in Canada is coming to an end this weekend in Vancouver.

In its 19th year, the Hopscotch Festival started on Nov. 17 and is wrapping up its final events on Sunday.

It's the longest-running scotch, whiskey and beer festival that offers tasting opportunities, education seminars and satellite events for liquor enthusiasts, says the organizer.

"It's awesome," said Adam Bloch, festival organizer. "Everyone's been great. People love whiskey and they love beer."

Bloch said some highlights so far this week included the Jack Daniels dinner at the Blarney Stone featuring live jazz, the Belvanie whiskey dinner at Sutton place and a Glenfiddich scotch-pairing dinner.

"We do all this preparation and it's so stressful but at the end of the day, because of me and my team, 10,000 people have a great night with dinners, seminars, tastings and we're giving them a great time," he said.

The main Grand Tasting Hall event will take place this Friday and Saturday at the PNE Forum featuring more than 100 exhibitors and 300 product samples.

Journalism vet recounts G20 summit

A veteran journalist who witnessed the mass arrests during the G20 summit four years ago told a police disciplinary hearing Thursday that in his 32-year career he had never seen Toronto officers "kettle" peaceful protesters.

Steve Paikin, who hosts TVO's The Agenda, testified in a hearing for Supt. David (Mark) Fenton, the most senior police officer charged in the mass arrests during the meeting of global leaders.

Paikin told the judge that before the night of June 26, 2010, he had never seen police in riot gear box in protesters who didn't appear to threaten public safety.

"I've never seen this much riot gear, never seen the kind of hemming in that officers did this time," he said.

In the past, he said, police only intervened when protesters became "overly aggressive."

"Those were not the conditions on the night in question,'' he said, noting the crowd gathered outside a downtown hotel was sitting and chanting the words "peaceful protest."

Fenton ordered officers to box in protesters in front of the hotel. More than 260 people were arrested and taken to a makeshift prisoner processing centre, which came under severe criticism for its deplorable conditions.

He has pleaded not guilty to a total of five charges of unlawful arrest and discreditable conduct arising out of two "kettling" incidents that occurred over the summit weekend, including the one that took place outside the hotel.

Ballots ready, are the parties?

'There is no other choice'

Speaking for missing, murdered women. Ex-Liberal senators have ready-made legal arguments to push for national examination

Former Liberals in the Senate are offering up ready-made legal arguments to anyone willing to take the federal government to court in order to force a national inquiry into missing and murdered aboriginal women and girls.

They say they are taking the legal route because Prime Minister Stephen Harper's Conservative government refuses to heed the calls of aboriginal groups, civil-liberty organizations and opposition parties to hold an inquiry.

"I think that there is no other choice than to go to court," said Sen. Serge Joyal, who wrote the legal argument.

"This is a way to press upon the government in a more efficient manner, so the government will have to defend its stance in court and be shamed by public opinion. That, I think, might compel the government to act, finally."

Joyal, a lawyer by training, cites sections of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, other legal cases and the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples to buttress his argument for an inquiry.

Joyal and his Senate colleague Lillian Dyck are in the early stages of finding someone who will take the case to Federal Court.

But they say a court case will put pressure on the Conservative government to call an inquiry, something it has refused.

"It could be an aspect of shaming," Dyck said.

"It could also be alerting Canadians to the fact that there is an underlying right amongst aboriginal women to be protected. And therefore, it might also then somehow increase pressure in other ways."

The government's latest budget included a five-year, $25-million renewal of money aimed at stopping violence against aboriginal women.

Canadian veterans given French Legion of Honour

Seventeen Second World War veterans in Montreal were awarded the French Legion of Honour on Thursday, including one who will turn 100 next year.

An emotional ceremony featuring the 17 was held in the presence of Philippe Zeller, the French ambassador to Canada, and deputy veterans affairs minister Walt Natynczyk.

Zeller described the award as an expression of France's wish to honour men who helped liberate the country during the war.

The oldest of the honorees was 99-year-old John Stuart Hermon, whose accomplishments include running the Boston Marathon at the age of 78.

For Hermon, the ceremony was a very touching experience.

"It makes one think how precious families and relatives are," the former captain in the 7th Field Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery, said in an interview.

Allan Bolduc, 91, after receiving the Legion of Honour. THE CANADIAN PRESS

"We should all be very grateful for the efforts that have been made by all of the veterans who are not here and that their families will eventually appreciate just what sacrifices their relatives have made in the battle of Europe."

Hermon recalled that his job was to drop bombs on the enemy and avoid getting killed.

"In the moment of battle, your mind is concentrated on doing a job, the same as it is in civilian life,'' he said. "There's no free pass and there's no turning back."

The 17 live at the Ste. Anne's Hospital for veterans in Sainte-Anne-de-Bellevue on the Island of Montreal. They are among some 600 Canadian veterans receiving the award this year. The Legion of Honour was created by Napoleon in 1802. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Top court to rule on Métis, non-status

Landmark case.
The court's eventual decision could vastly extend government jurisdiction to more Aboriginal Peoples

The question of whether the federal government has the same responsibility to the country's Métis and non-status Indians as it does to status Indians and Inuit has fallen to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The outcome of the case could vastly extend the federal government's jurisdiction to hundreds of thousands of Aboriginal Peoples.

Or it could overturn a historic victory.

On Thursday, the Supreme Court agreed to hear appeals from both sides in a case started 15 years ago by Métis leader Harry Daniels.

Legal battle continues

The Supreme Court also gave the Métis National Council, which is an intervenor to the case, more time to file its own response to the appeals.

- The council wanted the federal government to drop its appeal and start working out an agreement with the Métis people.

As usual, the court did not give reasons for its decision to hear the case.

The Congress of Aboriginal Peoples, along with several Métis and non-status Indians, took the federal government to court in 1999, alleging discrimination because they were not considered "Indians" under a section of the Constitution Act and thus have been denied rights.

Both the Métis and non-status Indians scored a major win last year when the Federal Court recognized them as "Indians" under a section of the Constitution. The federal government appealed that ruling.

Earlier this year, the Federal Court of Appeal upheld part of the decision.

"This is an important step in the long struggle begun by my predecessor as national chief of the Congress of Aboriginal Peoples, Harry Daniels," National Chief Betty Ann Lavallee said in a statement.

"The decision of the Court of Appeal was flawed in our view, as it drew an unhelpful distinction between the federal government's responsibility for non-status Indians and its responsibilities toward Métis peoples and status Indians."

Obesity costs $2 trillion a year: Report

The global cost of obesity has risen to $2 trillion US annually — nearly as much as smoking or the combined impact of armed violence, war and terrorism, according to a new report released Thursday.

The McKinsey Global Institute consulting firm's report focused on the economics of obesity, putting it among the top three social programs generated by human beings. It puts its impact at 2.8 per cent of global gross domestic product.

"Obesity isn't just a health issue," one of the report's authors, Richard Dobbs, said in a podcast. "But it's a major economic and business challenge."

The company says 2.1 billion people — about 30 per cent of the global population — are overweight or obese and that about 15 per cent of health-care costs in developed economies are driven by it.

In emerging markets, as countries get richer, the rate of obesity rises to the same level as that found in more developed countries. The report offers the stark prediction that nearly half the world's adult population will be overweight or obese by 2030 if present trends continue.

"We are on an unfortunate trajectory," Dobbs said. "We have to act."

The report's authors argue that efforts to deal with obesity have been piecemeal until now, and that a systemic response is needed.

McKinsey says there's no single or simple solution to the problem, but global disagreement on how to move forward is hurting progress. The analysis is meant to offer a starting point on the elements of a possible strategy. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Obama plans major changes to immigration

'Common-sense' plan? Illegal immigrants would be saved from deportation by receiving work permits

President Barack Obama is ordering far-reaching changes to the U.S. immigration system that will protect nearly five million people from deportation, testing the limits of his presidential powers and inviting a showdown with newly emboldened Republicans.

In a televised address Thursday night, Obama described the most sweeping changes to fractured immigration laws in nearly three decades, saying his executive actions were a "common-sense" plan consistent with what previous presidents of both parties had done.

Immigrants living illegally in the United States would be saved from deportation by receiving work permits; millions more would remain in limbo.

Obama sought to break a stalemate in America's long-simmering debate over immigration by cutting out Congress, confronting Republicans who swept congressional elections earlier this month and ensuring that the contentious debate will carry on into the 2016 presidential campaign.

"To those members of Congress who question my authority to make our immigration system work better, or question the wisdom of me acting where Congress has failed, I have one answer: Pass a bill," Obama said.

House of Representatives Speaker John Boehner, who has refused to have his Republican members vote on broad immigration legislation passed by the Senate last year, said Obama's decision to go it alone "cemented his legacy of lawlessness and squandered what little credibility he had left."

Obama, who had been weighing potential executive actions since early summer, planned to sign a pair of presidential memorandums Friday and travel to Las Vegas for an immigration rally as he appeals for support.

As Obama spoke from the White House, immigration supporters with American flags draped over their shoulders marched on the street outside carrying signs that read, "Gracias, Presidente Obama." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Florida State shooter believed government after him: Police

Conspiracy theories. Police have obtained a journal and videos of Myron May that detail his thoughts of being targeted for persecution

A Tallahassee police officer talks to several students outside the Strozier library on the Florida State University campus where a shooting occurred Thursday. The gunman was shot and killed by police officers. MARK WALLHEISER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Florida State University alumnus and attorney who shot three people at the school's library early Thursday believed the government was targeting him for persecution, detailing his thoughts in a journal and in videos detectives obtained, authorities said.

Officers fatally shot 31-year-old Myron May during an exchange outside the library at about 12:30 a.m.

May reloaded at least once and tried to enter the library, where 300 or more students were studying but was blocked by lobby security barriers that permit only students and staff inside, Tallahassee Police Chief Michael DeLeo said.

The shooting sent students scrambling for cover in the book aisles and barricading themselves in with desks amid screams from classmates.

One person is in critical condition and one is in good condition at a local hospital, while the third was released.

May's Facebook page shows he posted mostly Bible verses and links to conspiracy theories about the government reading people's minds.

According to a Las Cruces, New Mexico, police report last month, May was a subject of a harassment complaint after a former girlfriend called to report he came to her home uninvited and claimed police were bugging his house and car.

The report also said May recently quit his job and was on medication.

No charges were filed.

Abigail Taunton, who runs a foster home, told the Associated Press that May was staying at a guest house she owns. She said she had known him since he was about 14 and that he ran cross country with her kids and stayed at her house a lot.

She said he lived with his grandmother after coming out of a "bad situation" with his parents.

Swedish appeals court

Detention order for Assange remains

A Swedish appeals court upheld the detention order on Julian Assange on Thursday, dismissing a challenge by the WikiLeaks founder who is wanted by prosecutors in an investigation of alleged sex crimes.

Confirming a ruling by a lower court, the Svea appeals court said there is no reason to lift the detention order just because it can't be enforced at the moment.

Assange has avoided being extradited to Sweden by taking shelter in the Ecuadorean Embassy in London since 2012.

The court also criticized the prosecutors, who have declined Assange's offer to be questioned in London, for not considering "alternative avenues" to move the investigation forward.

Assange hasn't been formally indicted in Sweden, but is wanted for questioning by police about allegations of sexual misconduct and rape involving two women in 2010.

Egyptian court acquits doc who killed girl by performing genital mutilation

An Egyptian court on Thursday acquitted a doctor charged with performing female genital mutilation that led to a 13-year-old girl's death in a Nile Delta village, the country's first trial on charges of breaking the ban on the practice.

The verdict surprised activists against the practice, who had been hoping for a conviction and tough sentence to serve as a deterrent for doctors and families.

Egypt has one of the highest rates of female genital mutilation in the world and criminalized the practice in 2008, but it remains widespread.

The court in the Nile Delta Province of Dakahliya ruled that the doctor, Raslan Fadl, and the father of Sohair el-Batea, the girl who died, were not guilty on charges of breaking the ban on the practice, said Reda el-Danbouki, a lawyer involved in bringing the case to trial.

The judge also dropped a charge of manslaughter because the family and the doctor had earlier agreed to reconcile, el-Danbouki said.

El-Danbouki said he is coordinating with rights groups to appeal the verdict.

More than 90 per cent of Egyptian women are estimated to have undergone the procedure, which in a conservative society is believed to control a young woman's sexual appetite. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Syrian Kurdish refugee girl from the Kobani area looks at her mother at a camp in Suruc, on the Turkey-Syria border, on Thursday. Kobani, also known as Ayn Arab, and its surrounding areas have been under assault by extremists of the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant group since mid-September.

Syrian refugees need aid: Report

Many destitute.
Amnesty International says 85 per cent of Syrian refugees in Turkey living outside government camps

With Turkey's government-run refugee camps operating at full capacity, more than a million Syrian refugees who have flocked to Turkey to escape fighting at home are struggling to survive on their own, according to an Amnesty International report released Thursday.

Turkey, which hosts half of the 3.2 million refugees who have fled Syria, is shouldering the heaviest burden of what the report calls the world's worst refugee crisis in a generation.

"In three days in September 2014, Turkey received some 130,000 refugees from Syria — more than the entire European Union had in the past three years," the report said.

It also detailed cases where Turkish border guards have abused — even killed — refugees trying to enter the country.

An estimated 1.6 million Syrian refugees have entered Turkey since the Syrian war began in March 2011. About 220,000 are living in 22 government-run camps that offer food and essential services, the report said.

The remaining 1.38 million — more than 85 per cent — are living outside the camps, mostly in communities along the Turkey-Syrian border. An estimated 330,000 live in Istanbul. So far, Turkey has spent about $4 billion on Syrian refugees and granted free health care to all Syrian refugees in the country.

The report said while Turkey has an open-border policy for Syrian refugees, there are just two fully open crossings along its 900-kilometre border. Even at those crossings, the report said, people without passports are being denied entrance unless they have urgent needs.

Other refugees trek into Turkey through often dangerous crossing points.

According to Amnesty, at least 17 people were shot and killed by border guards at unofficial crossing points between December 2013 and August.

"Turkey is clearly struggling to meet even the most basic needs of hundreds of thousands of Syrian refugees. The result is that many of those who have made it across the border have been abandoned to a life of destitution," said Andrew Gardner, Amnesty International's researcher on Turkey.

Money matters

- Of the United Nations funding appeal for $3.74 billion to aid Syrians, only 51 per cent has been received, the report said.

Russian hackers easily swipe personal videos

Online security.
Hackers targeted baby monitors, webcams and personal security cameras and uploaded the footage to a website

For Russian hackers, it's as easy as 1-2-3-4.

That's among the simple manufacturer passwords that have been exploited to swipe personal video from computers in more than 100 countries, including Canada, and post the footage on a Russian website, according to Britain's information commission.

The hackers have been targeting baby monitors, webcams and personal security cameras, uploading the footage to a site authorities have declined to identify for fear of driving traffic its way.

A child playing in Bucheon, South Korea, and an empty crib in Absecon, N.J., are among the video images that have appeared on the website, Britain's Information Commissioner's Office said Thursday.

The hackers have posted footage from bedrooms, office buildings, shops, laundromats, stables and barns, the agency said.

Canada's Privacy Commissioner could not immediately say how many Canadians have been targeted, or how they have been affected, but spokeswoman Anne-Marie Hayden said the commission was trying to get the hacked images taken off the website.

VOICES

MEN'S RIGHTS ≠ MISOGYNY

In a country that often shines the spotlight on women's rights, is there a place for centres — like one opened this week in Toronto — dedicated to men's issues, or do their values run counter to feminism? Metro's Rosemary Westwood argues that gender rights can't exist without men in the conversation, even if they're advocating on their own behalf.

ROSEMARY WESTWOOD
Metro in Toronto

No good will come of using men as props in the fight for gender equality.

That's why the city — and country — needs a men's centre.

The new Canadian Centre for Men and Families — which offers workshops, support groups and counselling for boys, men and fathers — has been criticized for allegedly misrepresenting itself and holding anti-feminist views. But a men's centre of some kind could provide exactly what feminists and women's advocates have been calling for: more people of both genders taking responsibility for inequality and seeking solutions.

Yes, men still have many of the hallmarks of privilege. They make more money than women. They are vastly overrepresented in politics and business. And yes, men are also in large part the perpetrators of violence (four times out of five, according to Statistics Canada).

But men are increasingly arguing that women aren't the only ones hurt by the gender divide. And they're right.

Current ideas of masculinity are toxic for both genders. The suicide rate for men is roughly three times that for women.

They face issues related to custody and divorce, as well as body image (boys as young as 10 are reportedly becoming obsessed with building muscles). Men are also about as likely as women to be the victims of violence.

And they can be victims of sexualized violence, too.

I'll even quote the infamous Warren Farrell, dubbed the father of the so-called men's rights movement, whose work is referenced by the Canadian Centre for Men and Families:

"We need to know not only why are our sons committing suicide, but also why are our sons much more likely to be the ones to shoot up schools?" he asked on NPR. "We're all in jeopardy if we don't pay attention to the cries of pain and isolation and alienation that are happening among our sons."

That's what makes groups such as WizeGuys so awesome. The sexual education group in Alberta sees men educating boys not just on their bodies, sexual health, and issues of consent, but also on how to build empathy and on "the connection between masculinity and male norms, sexuality and violence."

What if we had a national centre that housed the debate, research, policy-making and educational resources to open up that conversation?

Wouldn't that make men responsible for solutions to problems such as sexual violence — exactly what we feminists have been calling for?

Women's issues have (rightly) taken centre stage. But it's time to share the spotlight.

Fathers for Justice campaigners, dressed as Spider-Man and Batman, hold a sign saying "Stop War on Dads" on the roof of a politician's home in London, England. A new Canadian centre for men is trying to distance itself from more fringe elements in the men's rights movement. CATE GILLON/GETTY IMAGES

The other side

When the Canadian Centre for Men and Families opened in Toronto this week, it wasn't without controversy.

- Opponents worry groups like these bring together people with misogynistic beliefs who blame women and feminists for all of their problems.
- The Canadian Association for Equality (CAFE), for example, has been a magnet for controversy and a target for protest and criticism. It reached a peak in November 2012, when a talk by controversial author Warren Farrell was the scene of loud protests by about 100 people from feminist and left-wing groups.
- Critics have also accused the group of links to the website A Voice For Men, which is perceived as condoning violence. CAFE's director has denied any link.

KATE CARRAWAY
Guest column

There's no better feeling than feeling known. It really is the warmest human pleasure, to be called out or identified or teased or even criticized in some way that demonstrates another person's sense of who — how — you are, for better or worse. "They just get me," we say about a new love or a friend or some other person who, not "as if" by magic, but really by magic, seems to understand us in the way we want and maybe even need to be understood.

That's why being known the wrong way is totally, singularly devastating: Being misunderstood by someone who thinks they really got it, but in fact was just making assumptions, or demonstrating their expectations, feels so much worse than being ignored.

It's so common, and so constant, though, because deciding that someone is some way based on a few easy, obvious, quick facts requires almost no effort of imagination or emotional labour.

I've found that acquaintances in real life and online — with good intentions and bad — feel just fine asking me way-too-personal questions because I'm a writer and have shared a lot about myself, both artificially and earnestly, in newspapers and magazines; it's as if I owe them some piece of my privacy.

I write often about relationships — but never mention who or if I'm dating — which has meant that readers assume it's chill to email me aggressively flirtatious stuff, because they assume I'm into it. (No.)

It's a particular kind of rudeness, really, that we just accept from each other, and it's actually getting to be a lot of people's problem, more and more, as social media establishes and asserts itself as a half-real part of our identities.

Using an online or social-media persona as a meaningful indication of someone else's life and brain and feelings is almost unavoidable — too easy, too obvious, too fast — when there is so much stuff there to go on, and so much of it apparently personal, apparently insistent. It's defensive, maybe: Let a Facebook page do the hard, confusing work of getting to know someone, of getting close, even if it means missing the point. See? Rude.

These great, stupid expectations are, more generally, life-ruiners: Almost every problem can be attributed to an assumption or an expectation, to thinking we're owed something, we deserve something, we're right about something. Or, someone. Being mistaken for the person I am in my writing or online has shown me on a near-constant basis how much people take for granted about each other, and in general.

As culture "flattens" beyond our obvious demographics and lifestyles, and our individual differences become more nuanced and acute, it should follow that we assume and expect less of each other, accept possibility and surprise, and let people reveal themselves slowly, subtly — and get to reveal ourselves, too.

Games of prey go way back

Mockingjay, Part 1. Hunger Games' theme of humans hunting each other to entertain the rich and powerful is a well-worn premise in books and movies

Josh Hutcherson as Peeta and Jennifer Lawrence as Katniss star in Hunger Games: Mockingjay, Part 1. CONTRIBUTED

Since the release of the first Hunger Games novel in 2008, literary sleuths have picked it apart, searching for connections to other books and films.

The scrutiny increased when the first film in the tetralogy set records for the biggest opening weekend for a non-sequel in 2013, and continues unabated with the release of this weekend's The Hunger Games: Mockingjay, Part 1.

Based on Suzanne Collins's mega-successful series, the movies are set in a dystopian world ruled by a fascist-style president (Donald Sutherland) who presides over The Hunger Games, a televised battle-to-the-death between 24 young players, two from each of the country's districts, including Katniss Everdeen (Jennifer Lawrence) and Peeta Mellark (Josh Hutcherson).

The series draws on things we've seen before, in everything from the human sacrifices of Greek mythology or Survivor-style television shows to news stories of government corruption to create a world with its own rules, style and customs.

The most often-cited influence is Battle Royale, a 2000 Japanese movie based on a book by Koushun Takami. Like The Hunger Games, it's a story of school kids in a televised government-sanctioned death match.

Battle Royale's DVD box set even included a quote from a critic suggesting there'd be no Hunger Games without the Japanese film. "This is the movie that started it all," it reads.

Hunger fans were quick to point out differences in the two films.

The Japanese movie is about survival, they said, while Collins wrote about revolution. The author revealed her main influences were reality television and the Iraq war.

"I had never heard of that book or that author until my book was turned in," she told the New York Times.

It's worth noting that the idea of humans being preyed upon for the entertainment of the upper classes dates back at least as far as 1932's The Most Dangerous Game.

The story of a big-game hunter who tracks humans for sport on an isolated island is based on a Richard Connell short story that also loosely inspired episodes of everything from Gilligan's Island to Lost in Space.

Since then, Norman Jewison's Rollerball, Roger Corman's Deathrace 2000 (and its 2008 Jason Statham remake) and The Running Man have mined similar territory.

As for the author who wrote Battle Royale, he gave ABC News a very diplomatic answer when asked about the similarities between the two stories.

"I think every novel has something to offer," he said.

"If readers find value in either book, that's all an author can ask for."

The Hunger Games: Mockingjay, Part 1

Directors. Francis Lawrence

Stars. Jennifer Lawrence, Josh Hutcherson

Mockingjay, Part 1 ups the stakes considerably from the last film in the series, putting several big ideas into motion. The cinematic world created in the first two movies is about to change in very dramatic ways, and this movie prepares viewers for the revolution that will try to unify the districts against the evil President Snow (Donald Sutherland). Katniss (Jennifer Lawrence) looks suitably concerned throughout and there are several effectively staged action scenes. But despite fine performances from Lawrence, Julianne Moore and Phillip Seymour Hoffman, and lessons in mass-produced anarchy, it occasionally feels padded, like a place holder for next year's series finale.

A staple in the community

As one of the oldest forces in Canada, the New Westminster Police Department (NWPD) provides unique opportunities for its members while also being an important staple in the community.

In exemplary fashion, the department recently shared a story in a new video about an incident that, thanks to teamwork, top-notch training and excellent problem-solving skills, members were able to prevent a tragedy in their city.

"As police officers, we want to save people," says NWPD Const. Sean Hackman. "We signed up for this job to preserve life."

The video highlights different officers relating a story about how a suicidal male brandishing a gun tested their training, but by remaining calm and working together the man was not able to harm himself or anyone else.

One common theme is how each officer featured in the video credits their training for helping them when they needed it most.

At the NWPD, all members are treated as more than just a badge number. Chief Const. Dave Jones knows each member by name and carefully considers their training and development needs.

If you would like to know more about the application process, or view the video mentioned in the story, visit nwpolice.org. There are also volunteer opportunities with the victim assistance unit, community service section, and more.

Joining the Hunger Games revolution

Katniss Everdeen now has lots of help in her quest to overthrow President Snow's corrupt government

REGAN REID
scene@metronews.ca

The last time we saw Katniss Everdeen, the bow-and-arrow-wielding hero of The Hunger Games, she had just escaped the Quarter Quell (a special anniversary edition of the Games that featured victors from previous years).

After destroying the Games arena and being airlifted to safety, Katniss learns that her mentor, Haymitch Abernathy, the Head Gamemaker, Plutarch Heavensbee, and many of her closest friends and allies have all helped orchestrate a plan to take down President Snow's government.

The leaders of this rebellion want her to be the poster child for the cause. In case she needs extra convincing, she's told that Peeta is imprisoned in the Capitol and that her home, District 12, has been destroyed by firebombs.

Needless to say, in The Hunger Games: Mockingjay, Part 1, Katniss is on the warpath.

When she discovers that Peeta has been brainwashed to support the Capitol's fight against the rebels, this only fuels her desire to defeat President Snow once and for all. And this time, she'll have some help.

Here's a brief introduction to some of the new characters who will join Katniss and the rebellion.

President Alma Coin (Julianne Moore)

For those a little foggy on the history of Panem, the districts waged a war against the Capitol 75 years ago and lost. As punishment, District 13 was bombed into oblivion — or so we thought. As we learn at the end of Catching Fire, District 13 still exists, but its citizens now live deep underground. President Alma Coin is not only the leader of District 13 but also of the insurrection against the Capitol. Her subterranean facility serves as the rebels' home base. As her sleek grey hair, crisp grey uniform and cold grey eyes suggest, Coin is stern. She runs her district like a military boarding school. Its citizens adhere to strict schedules, have assigned daily duties, and train for future attacks. Coin is not to be messed with — something Katniss may soon figure out for herself.

Boggs (Mahershala Ali)

Boggs is President Coin's right-hand man. Like most District 13ers, he seems cold and robotic when we first meet him — but that's probably due to the years of rigorous training, controlled diet and an altogether dull lifestyle that's enforced by Coin's administration. When Katniss joins the rebellion, Boggs is assigned to be her personal bodyguard and we quickly learn that he's not so stiff. He's actually kind, smart and very protective of Katniss, all qualities that will probably be beneficial to her when they head into battle together.

Cressida (Natalie Dormer)

A native of the Capitol, Cressida is the director of a film crew assigned to follow Katniss as they film propaganda to support the rebellion. As you can tell by her punk hairdo — half her head is shaved and tattooed with vines — Cressida is not frilly or delicate like most of her Capitol compatriots. She and her team will follow Katniss into war zones without blinking an eye. She's a true professional, always looking to get the best footage for her rebel employers, but she's also a firm believer in the cause. She tells Katniss early on that she wasn't poached by Plutarch to do a job, she chose to leave the Capitol and join the fight.

Slurp on the rustic side

Soup Week. We wrap up a week of brothy delights with this Chicken and Corn Chowder in Squash

RICARDO COOKS
Chef Ricardo
Ricardo Magazine

A warm, comforting bowl of soup is one of the best things to warm up to on a chilly day and it's also a great way to enjoy the last crop of the season.

This chowder is a beautiful ways to showcase in-season squash.

This recipe serves four. COURTESY RICARDOCUISINE.COM

Ingredients

Bowls (squash halves)
- 2 buttercup squash, about 3 1/2 lb (1.6 kg) each, stem removed
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) olive oil
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) balsamic vinegar
- Salt and pepper
- 8 slices bacon

Chicken and Corn Chowder
- 1 onion, chopped
- 2 stalks celery, thinly sliced
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) butter
- 2 skinless and boneless chicken breast halves, cut into cubes
- 1 clove garlic, finely chopped
- 6 tbsp (90 ml) all-purpose flour
- 4 cups (1 litre) chicken broth
- 1 1/2 cups (375 ml) potatoes, peeled and diced
- 1 cup (250 ml) 35% cream
- 1 cup (250 ml) corn kernels, fresh or frozen
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) chopped parsley

Bowls (squash halves)

1. With the rack in the middle position, preheat the oven to 350 F (180 C).

2. Cut each squash in half horizontally to form four bowls. With a spoon, scrape out the seeds until the inner surface is smooth. If the top of the squash is shallower, scrape off more flesh. With a knife, score the flesh in a crisscross manner every 1 inch (2.5 cm) without piercing the skin.

3. Brush with the oil and vinegar. Season with salt and pepper. Place 2 slices of bacon into each squash half. Place on a baking sheet. Bake for about 1 hour and 30 minutes or until the flesh is tender and the bacon is crispy. Remove the bacon and keep aside.

Chicken and Corn Chowder

1. In a saucepan, brown the onion and celery in the butter. Add the chicken and sauté until golden brown. Add the garlic and cook for 1 minute. Sprinkle with the flour and cook for 1 minute, stirring constantly.

2. Add broth, potatoes and cream. Bring to boil, stirring continuously. Simmer gently 15 minutes or until the potatoes are tender. Add corn and cook 5 minutes. Add the parsley and adjust the seasoning.

3. Ladle the chowder into the squash and garnish with the bacon slices.

A fine wine balance

I come from the Maritimes, so I know my way around a bowl of chowder.

That said, what I love about Ricardo's chicken and corn interpretation is that there isn't a bowl, or, at least not one you'll need to put in the dishwasher.

Serving this chunky wonder from a half shell of rustic squash is more than inspired, it supports the recipe's initial burst of buttery, corn-forward sweetness and makes it ripe for a white wine match.

I know what you're thinking: Vegetables and wine can be a marriage made in Kardashian-land. Here they're a perfect foil for Chardonnay.

Though much maligned by the current crop of Internet-fed wine aficionados, Chardonnay is a multifaceted grape that gets its oak on in some wines, while putting round creamy fruit in the game in others.

While it may sound corny, J. Lohr Estates' 2012 Riverstone Chardonnay ($18.95 - $23.99) from California balances both the wood and fruit elements, making it a fine partner for this week's dish.

PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

Creamy with a Cajun kick

1. In a saucepan, soften onion, squash and garlic in oil about 5 minutes over low heat. Add the broth and potatoes.

2. Bring to boil and simmer, covered, 20 minutes or until the vegetables are tender. In a blender, purée until smooth. Add broth, if needed. Season with salt and pepper.

3. In a small bowl, combine the spices. Set aside.

4. In a large non-stick skillet over high heat, brown the shrimp and shallot in the oil. Add the spices, lemon juice and Worcestershire sauce. Season with salt and pepper. Ladle the soup into bowls and top with the Cajun shrimp. Sprinkle with the pecans.

The holidays are an exciting time to be a gamer. Not only do all the triple A titles hit stores, so do the limited edition consoles, along with a myriad of unique gaming accessories. Here are a few gift ideas for the ultimate gamer on your list.

Nintendo 3DS XL, $199.99.

Glacier White Playstation 4
$469.99

A striking new look for Sony's popular gaming console. This new version features a glossy white finish, a stark comparison to the original black model. In fact, gamers like the look so much, this unique console sells out as soon as it hits store shelves. Despite its new look, the console has all the same features of the original PS4, and can only be purchased as a bundle with the blockbuster title Destiny.

iPod Touch
$219 and up

iPod Touch, $219 and up.

Once used primarily for music, Apple's iPod Touch has quickly become a popular platform for gaming. This ultra-portable device features a beautiful four-inch retina display, snappy processor, and more than 250,000 game titles from which to choose. On top of this, the built-in dual cameras give this device many uses.

Nintendo 3DS XL
$199.99

While this popular handheld has been around for more than two years, Nintendo has decided to freshen it up with a stylish new look. Three new models will be on Canadian store shelves this holiday season, themed after Super Smash Bros, Persona Q, and the classic Nintendo Entertainment System. The look may be new but the hardware remains the same.

Hyperkin RetroN 5
$149.95

A console that lets you play classic games from the past. The RetroN 5 features cartridge slots that will work with Gameboy, Gameboy Colour, Gameboy Advance, Famicom, Super Famicom, Nintendo, Super Nintendo, Sega Genesis and Megadrive games. The console enhances the resolution of these classic titles and supports the ability to save your game at any point. Important to note: You need the original cartridges to play games.

Playstation TV
$99.99

A tiny device with a lot of potential. Playstation TV, about the size of a smartphone, lets you watch movies, TV shows, and play original Playstation, Playstation 2 and Playstation 3 games on your TV, even if you don't own the consoles. A small cartridge slot lets PS Vita owners play the handheld games on the big screen, plus PS4 owners can stream games to a second television, meaning you'll never have to move your PS4 console around the house again. Important to note, not all Playstation titles work with Playstation TV at this time.

Glacier White Playstation 4, $469.99.

Jeered Ryan Kesler gets the last laugh

No warm welcome. Anaheim takes home two points in shootout win over Canucks

CAM TUCKER
cam.tucker@metronews.ca

Ryan Kesler was hoping for a warm reception in his return to Rogers Arena. He didn't get it.

He was expecting his team, the Anaheim Ducks, to earn two points and get out of Vancouver. That worked out for him. Yes, the big story was the return of Kesler, who demanded a trade and finally got one in June.

The fans in attendance for Thursday's Pacific Division tilt who chose to boo the 2011 Selke Trophy winner were loud and persistent, voicing their displeasure every time Anaheim's new No. 17 touched the puck.

Kesler got the last laugh. He didn't score in the shootout, but the Ducks won in the deciding skills competition, coming back to defeat the Canucks 4-3.

Canucks' defenceman Dan Hamhuis left the game early in the first period and did not return with a lower-body injury.

Hamhuis, who played only one shift, was tracking the puck in the offensive zone when he suddenly pulled up and fell into the corner.

He couldn't put any weight on his right leg when he was helped off the ice.

Kesler was, as expected, in the thick of the action. But the only applause he received was at the start of the second period, when he was shown on the big screen sitting in the penalty box, serving a minor penalty.

Bo Horvat, 19, scored his first NHL goal for Vancouver, three minutes into the second period.

Disappointing Lions cut coach Benevides

Mike Benevides was the fall guy after a disastrous 2014 season for the B.C. Lions.

He was fired Thursday, but his final moments on the Lions' sideline came in an embarrassing 50-17 loss in the East semifinal to the Montreal Alouettes on Sunday.

While one man has lost his job, there is plenty of blame to go around throughout the organization, including the guys at the top.

The Lions were a team ravaged by injuries.

General manager Wally Buono said some players who filled in for those who were injured performed well, but others didn't meet expectations.

Buono, who stepped out of the coaching gig following the 2011 Grey Cup championship and hand-picked Benevides as his successor, took responsibility for not providing the coaching staff with enough quality personnel to withstand the impact of so many injuries.

"I'm going to say no, because obviously my job is to surround Mike with the kind of players that help you win championships," said Buono.

"I'm not saying I was at fault, but at the end of it, when you're responsible for winning, I didn't do enough to help us win."

It would appear Buono will be looking outside the organization for the successful candidate to replace Benevides.

"I need to re-establish a tradition, an expectation. The only way to do that is to start fresh. I don't believe I would be fresh," said Buono. CAM TUCKER/METRO
